Suzhou

Added as a UNESCO World Heritage Site for its meticulously planned classical gardens and intercity canal system, Suzhou is aptly called the "Venice of China". Furthermore, the beautifully structured pagodas and stone bridges, plus the local embroidery and handicrafts, have gone a long way in making it a tourist hotspot.

Situated on the Yangtze River Delta region, right on the Taihu Lake shore, in Eastern China, this city's history goes back to 514 BC. Apart from its unrivalled beauty, Suzhou is also a major centre of joint-venture manufacturing and currently holds the title 'World's largest producer of laptop computers'. Culturally strong, this city has given birth to many forms of opera and is home to the world famous Suzhou embroidery as well. It is full of lovely, scenic streets lined with 'old style' shops, which can be explored on foot or on a rented bike. A boat ride on the canal route is another interesting way of exploring the city.
